

Vertical communication and collaboration for climate action - from local to national climate action

Description

This workshop aims to bring multiple EUKI projects together to represent the different governance levels (local, regional, national) and have a moderated, interactive discussion about how they view and experience vertical collaboration in their projects as well as best practices in strategically involving/integrating multiple governance levels.

BEACON has carried out a series of 'vertical workshops' addressing the need for better cooperation between local and national levels and will also report on the experience made in the session.

Vertical collaboration is relevant for numerous EUKI projects that work directly or indirectly across multiple governance levels. Only through adequate and solution-oriented interaction and communication between governance levels, effective climate policy can be implemented.
